K50 Waterfall

Comeback to the Mother Nature

Don't miss!

K50 waterfall (Hang En waterfall) is a must-visit trekking destination for those who love nature and are passionate about exploring. This beautiful waterfall is located in the middle of untouched Central Highlands old forests. The big old trees, entwined ropes, 60 degrees high slope, interwoven with swamps full of people, earthworms nearly 1m long, giant ferns... just like adventure movies in the jungle. Amazon primeval.

To conquer and explore the K50 waterfall trekking journey, you need a brave heart, a persistent pair of legs and a restless spirit of adventure. You will need to cross the forest and wade through streams for about 17km through many extremely difficult and dangerous mountainous terrains. But just seeing the waterfall, letting the steam blow on you, your whole body will be revived with an even stronger energy source when you start the journey.

Go and listen to the sound of water falling on the rocks, creeping through the crevices, murmuring. Her melodious voice in the middle of the forest, enticing adventurers to be excited, despite the danger to find K50 waterfall. The primeval forest with rich flora is operating in accordance with the laws of nature. Large, rotten trees fall down to provide nutrients for seedlings to grow. Tiny insects perched on the foliage, the sound of birdsong, cicadas chirping in the golden sunlight peeking through the gaps in the leaves.

The priceless reward when exploring K50 waterfall is the experience of dropping into the cool water. Listen to the sound of the waterfall whispering in your ears to find moments of peaceful relaxation. Camp by the falls, catch your own fish and make interesting new friends. And if you are lucky (quite often here), you will see a magical rainbow at the foot of the waterfall, creating a beautiful scene like a fairyland.

And let's go with Bi to challenge yourself, to return to mother nature, to return to yourself.

Message

from Bi's Founder

One afternoon wandering at the library, when I accidentally flipped through the picture book “Mekong Chronicles“, the river spreading out in the middle of the wild nature immediately overwhelmed my mind. At that moment, my heart had a small “ting“ sound, and thus 2012, Bitour was born.

Nguyễn Ngọc Thư

Thạc sĩ Xã hội học - ĐH KHXH & NV (HCMC)
Cử nhân Kinh doanh Quốc tế - ĐH Metropolia (Helsinki)

I started as the first pioneering company in Vietnam to organize tours for singles about nature, making it easy for people to “get in the mood for love“. Then after trekking through Ta Nang Phan Dung forest, I decided to expand Bitour to nature experiences because I realized that in the forest people connect more naturally.

Watching many customers go through the forest for nearly 20 kilometers from early morning to late afternoon to arrive at the camp on the high hill should have exhausted people, but to my surprise, I found everyone seemed so young, out, happier, and full of life.

That's what got me thinking!

I study sociology, so anything that affects people is in my interest, especially the relationship between people and nature.

Born in the Central Highlands, to be honest, my friends and I have started “trekking“, and “hiking“ across the forest, crossing streams and waterfalls since we were little. Nature is nothing new and we also had a completely healthy and happy childhood thanks to living in the fresh air among those old forests. But in terms of science, is there any relationship between nature and human health and happiness? Or are they just “comfortable feelings“?

I decided to dig deeper, especially after a terrible headache that lasted for 4 months without stopping for a single second. I started from Japan, and Korea to America and Nordic countries. Obviously, there are many different directions of research, but they all lead to the same conclusion: nature has a positive, clear, and completely measurable impact on people's mental and physical health.

Then I went back to the East, back to where I was born, back to myself. And from the silence, I realized that man is finally a part of nature. Most of the problems that we are facing are due to living contrary to nature, contrary to human nature. I myself, when I started to leave my hometown to live in the city, where nature was absent, I also encountered many health problems and other troubles.

Lời nhắn

từ Bi's Founder

That's why I believe that "as long as you live according to nature, everything will go naturally."

Bitour, we are no longer a company that sells experience trips. We have gone further on our way. The road helps people connect with nature so we can live healthier and happier lives.

That road also took me to Finland, where I've always wanted to go since I was a kid. Finland is the happiest country in the world based on a lifestyle that loves, respects, and is close to nature. I experienced it while living in the middle of Helsinki, the capital that weaves its way through vast forests.

I believe that this journey is just the beginning of the "trips to return" to help me and my associates, who share the same love of nature, to do the things that we aspire to do.

Travel is not just a trip. Traveling is how we go back to our roots, understand ourselves, and connect with nature to live healthier, healthier, happier lives. I would like to sincerely thank all the nobles, associates, partners, colleagues, and customers who have always supported and accompanied Bitour, and thank my family for always loving me.

See you soon on trips to nature together!

With all due respect from the bottom of my heart,

Nguyen Ngoc Thu
